

Annual performance data for distributors' guaranteed service level (GSL) payments

This page contains annual performance data for Guaranteed Service Level (GSL) payments that Victorian electricity distributors make to customers. This data is submitted to both the Essential Services Commission and the Australian Energy Regulator (AER). The data shows distributors' performance against the customer service standards set in the Electricity Distribution Code of Practice.

Electricity distributors are required to make GSL payments to customers who experience certain types of service disruptions. This includes, but is not limited to, unplanned electricity supply outages. In 2021, we modernised the GSL scheme to improve how distributors identify eligible customers. We implemented new requirements to use smart meter data for assessing eligibility for unplanned outage payments. This update ensured that all eligible customers are better able to receive timely payments when service levels fall below relevant standards.

Electricity distributors must also report detailed performance data to us each year. This includes the number of GSL payments made and total GSL payment costs.

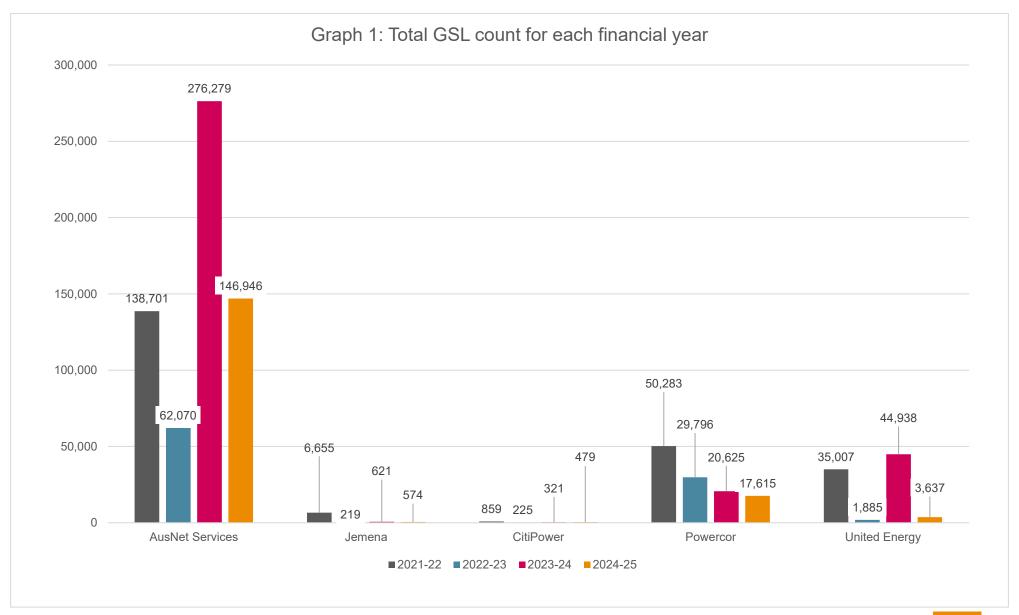

The table below sets out comparative GSL data for the five Victorian electricity distributors since 2021-22.
