A fair go for solar

10/2/16

I believe a 1:1 Feed in Tariff is the only fair way to go (energy exports are paid the same rate as what the consumer is being charged). Considering home owners and businesses are prepared to spend their hard earned on producing clean energy - why then should retail energy companies profit from this? The benefits of generating clean power from solar panels are numerous. It is time the Victorian government do the right thing and revise the feed in tariff payment. At the same time an investigation of greedy energy companies and their immoral practices should be the focus of a review instead of allowing these companies to take advantage of home owners and businesses trying to do the right thing by our environment.

A fair go is all we ask.
