Unfair rebate for generated Solar Power

9/2/16

Good afternoon,

With regard to your enquiry may I advise following for your information.

I have solar power system installed and at this time of year generate considerable excess of power which is returned to the grid. At the rebate I am receiving the power company is most certainly gaining an advantage against the rate it charges me overnight.

I am seriously considering using a battery system to capture this excess which of course, would reduce my consumption rate from the grid considerably.

The winner from this would be me, and not the power company.

May you in the course of your enquiry consider the advantage to the power supplier by increasing the rate of return to the solar provider to avoid this situation.

With regard to the sad story that the company must provide poles and wires please bear in mind that my connection fees certainly go to assisting this problem.
